COURSE OVERVIEW

The clinical neurosciences are undergoing rapid changes in the diagnosis and treatment of neurological disorders, particularly those concerning surgical treatment options. After attending this course, physicians and other healthcare professionals will have an increased awareness of both established and emerging treatment options for brain tumors, movement disorders (Parkinson's and epilepsy diseases), degenerative neurological and spinal disorders, endovascular and stroke treatment. The program will present the treatment options in an interdisciplinary fashion using plenary lectures, case presentations and point-counter-point case studies and will offer participants an opportunity to engage in interactive discussions with renowned faculty who are involved with initiating these neurological advances.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

- Decrease cardiovascular events in your stroke patients by using advanced treatments and communication to improve cholesterol profiles, reduce obesity, manage diabetes and high blood pressure, and stress the importance of smoking cessation
- Outline the advantages and disadvantages of intra-arterial stroke therapy within and outside of the context of a clinical trial
- Describe emerging vascular interventions for improved stroke outcomes
- Describe radiosurgery, biological therapies and novel approaches to target intracranial brain tumors
- Utilize advanced research and treatment options to reduce the high occurrence of chronic neurologic diseases in your patients

- Outline the advantages of conducting deep brain stimulation early in the disease process in order to maximize long-term patient outcomes

- Describe the benefits of new minimally invasive and research technologies for spinal disorders

TARGET AUDIENCE

This course meets the educational needs of physicians, including internists, family practice physicians, OB/Gyn, neurologists, pain medicine and rehabilitation specialists, rheumatologists, orthopedic spine surgeons, neurosurgeons, oncologists, chiropractors, nurses and allied healthcare professionals in these specialties.

ACCREDITATION

Cedars-Sinai Medical Center is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.
